Background: Twenty-five years of trial experience
Former Executive Assistant District Attorney
Registered Patent Attorney, U.S. Patent and Trademark Office
J.D., 1980; B.S., Physics, 1974.

John Flock is an intellectual property trial attorney who has been chosen by some of the world's leading technology companies to represent them in litigation matters.

Mr. Flock has thirty years of trial experience, having started his legal career as an Assistant District Attorney in New York City, where he developed his understanding of litigation strategy, trial preparation and how to try a jury case. In addition to trying criminal jury trials, he argued appellate cases and advised attorneys on trial tactics, leading to his promotion to the position of Executive Assistant District Attorney. For the past two decades he has practiced at Kenyon & Kenyon, where he has combined his education (B.S. degree in physics), technical training, trial experience and intellectual property expertise in representing his clients in litigation.

Mr. Flock's trial successes have twice been selected by The National Law Journal as one of the top jury patent trials of the year. Mr. Flock has represented companies in patent infringement cases throughout the country on technologies in the fields of telecommunication standards, cryptography and encryption, semiconductors, wireless technology, digital music file formats, voice recognition systems, and digital file formats.

Mr. Flock has lectured and written for the National Law Journal, Practicing Law Institute, and the American Bar Association, and has been interviewed on national broadcast television on intellectual property issues. He is a member of Kenyon & Kenyon's Executive Committee and co-chair of the Electrical, Computer and Mechanical Practice group. He and his wife reside in New York City.
