

David Donahue is a Partner in the litigation department of Fross Zelnick Lehrman & Zissu, P.C., a New York-based intellectual property boutique law firm that focuses on Trademark, Copyright and Design law. David's litigation practice spans a broad range of industries, including luxury goods, apparel, music, film, art, and new media, among many others. In addition to litigating cases in federal and state trial and appellate courts, David negotiates and drafts commercial agreements relating to intellectual property matters. He also frequently lectures on intellectual property matters and currently serves as a member of the International Trademark Association's International Amicus Committee and as co-chair of the Membership Committee of the Copyright Society of the USA.