

JOSHUA D. SARNOFF is a Professor of Law at DePaul University College of Law, and a faculty member in and former director of the Center for Intellectual Property Law and Information Technology (CIPLIT[®]). He teaches patent law, advanced patent law, administrative law, law and climate change, and other courses. He was previously a professor at the Washington College of Law, American University, in the Glushko-Samuelsan Intellectual Property Law Clinic, and at the University of Arizona College of Law. From 2014 to 2015, Professor Sarnoff was a Thomas A. Edison Distinguished Scholar at the United States Patent and Trademark Office. He is a registered patent attorney and a member of the bars of Washington DC and California, a former member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Circuit Bar Association, a former pro bono mediator for the U.S Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, and a member of the boards of directors and advisory boards of various non-profit organizations. Professor Sarnoff has been involved in a wide range of intellectual property legal and policy disputes, has submitted testimony on domestic patent law reform bills, has filed numerous amicus briefs in the United States Supreme Court and in Federal Circuit on important patent law issues, and has been a consultant to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on international intellectual property, trade, and environmental issues. He is a frequent lecturer on intellectual property law issues and has written numerous articles and book chapters on patent law and on climate change. Professor Sarnoff is the editor of and a contributing author to the forthcoming RESEARCH HANDBOOK ON INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY AND CLIMATE CHANGE, to be published by Edward Elgar Publishing in April 2016.